

Kirkby in Ashfield

An Area Profile

Kirkby in Ashfield is a town situated in the centre of the Ashfield area. The town itself is based around a small pedestrian shopping area and open-air market. The town can be sub-divided into several smaller areas. To the east, Coxmoor Estate, stretching from the town centre through the park and up, what used to be called Holiday's Hill, to the open farm and woodlands.

Nuncargate, the birthplace of Harold Larwood (his statue is in Kirkby market place) is a village to the south of Kirkby. It grew to accommodate the growing numbers of colliery workers. Now it has its own post offices and shops with a variety of types of properties.

Even further south of the main town is Annesley, a village steeped in history and character. The Parish church once destroyed by fire, now refurbished. It is said to be haunted as is Annesley Hall.

Old Kirkby is situated on the west side of town. Kirkby Cross is the remains of a thirteenth century village cross in dressed stone. It is a listed structure and designated ancient monument.

Ashfield Homes has many types of properties including Flats, studio flats and houses. We have bungalows and sheltered schemes especially for the over 60s.
